

Predicting the future could win a $1,000 California or Illinois scholarship

September 1, 2012

Current or prospective California or Illinois college or university students could win an ATT scholarship of $1,000. To qualify, students need to post the answer to this question on their blog or website (Facebook and other social media don't count): "Where do you see the Internet in 10 years?"

The article needs to be 300 to 500 words in length, and the student must submit the URL of the piece, along with a name and email address, by Friday, November 30. To review the rules and apply, go to the California scholarship opportunity, or the Illinois scholarship.
